Final Website Feedback

David Dunn:

I contacted David Dunn, the owner of Central Arkansas Truck & Trailer, and I showed him my progress on the redesigned website, first the rapid prototype. He loved the overall design, especially how much more readable it was. He did want me to ensure that the article section remained, as they were still adding to that, and he wanted it to be easy for their marketing company to add to it. I kept that in mind when developing the final website and added the article section. Adding new articles will be relatively easy, just copy over one of the older articles as a template and replace the text and image. I then showed him the final version of the website and he loved it. He did have some notes, saying it needed more pictures, but overall was a great improvement. Unfortunately, because the developers of his website are also his advertisers, he cannot use my website, but he did have me send them my repo to see if they can use any of it.

Bailey Dunn:

Bailey was the person that brought up the original website to my attention, she is the accountant for CAT&T. She told me how horrible the old website is on mobile, and wanted that to be my priority. Because of this, I went with the mobile first mindset when designing. I showed her my progress throughout the build and she gave me a lot of feedback, specifically about the menus, and overall layout of the homepage. She ended up loving the final product, and wishes the actual website could look like that.

Nathan Dunn:

Nathan, the second-in-charge at CAT&T liked the idea of rebuilding the website, but he wanted me to make sure that service request buttons were still all over the website so that they could get more business. I agreed, and ensured that there were plenty of places to get to the service request form or call.
